Baklava from Ender

Baklava is a very tasty pastry for me.
Making this crispy delicacy is more difficult than other pastries.
I would also like to make it myself.
I don't eat sugar, so I would use agave syrup and honey for the syrup.

Şekerpare from Ender

I love eating Şekerpare.
I also make this soft pastry myself at home.
As I don't eat sugar, I make the sugar syrup with honey or agave syrup instead of sugar.

Samosa from Sina

Samosa exists in various countries.
It is known as in India, Somalia or Afghanistan.
My mum makes it the best!

Cuba (Iraqi)
by Lara

Kuba comes from the Arabic, it is a speciality from the East.
It is made from rice, minced meat and sultanas and is sweetened a little with sultanas.

Manti from Liya

Manti was a favourite dish of the sultans.
Manti is made at home, collectively, when the whole family is together and helps to shape the small manti pockets. There is a lot of laughing and talking.
Manti also exist in other cultures.

Pierogi from Ayleen, Victoria and Leonor

Pierogi is a typical cultural dish for us.
It is very versatile, because you can fill it with meat, onion or vegetables or sweet with berries.
It tastes juicy and is my favourite Polish dish.

Pide
from Azra and Duygu

It is a dish that is also made in the Dead Sea region.
But also, in other cities in Turkey.
It has the shape of small ships.

Çay
from Duygu and Azra

Çay is always drunk with a chat "Sohbet", for breakfast or when visitors are here.
A warm tea puts you in a good mood and relaxes you.

Burger from Melina

I made this burger because I like it, and I ate it at home recently.
We can make it ourselves and choose what we want on it.
Besides, a burger is part of the "fast food" range.

Sucuk from Renc

Garlic, breakfast (kahvaltı) and spices
Sucuk is used to make sucuk yumurta (sucuk with scrambled eggs), for example, and sucuk is usually eaten for breakfast.

Pide and mantı to start.

Then Sekerpare and Çay.

Best combination from Turkey.
